By John W. Finney

ENGTON, Oct. 2 (NYT).-The United States has proposed t and Israel agree to place all future nuclear facilities and a large atomic power plant each. Until now, the U.S. policy has been to require inspection by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) only over the atomic reactors and fuel it sup-plies to a foreign country. But in the case of Egypt and Israel, the United States is asking that they agree to accept international controls as well over all atomic power plants and fissionable materials that they may receive in the future from any coun-

The negotiations are proceed-ing more slowly than U.S. officials expected and some doubt was said to be developing over the possibility of working out parallel agreements on the sale of the reactors. The Israeli government has raised questions about provisions in the U.S. draft agreement, and U.S. officials have come to the conclusion from informal discussions that the international inspection issue was a principal reason behind Israel's delay in responding to the U.S.

Egypt Is Willing

But, according to State Department officials, Egypt has expressed a willingness to accept the controls sought by the United States.

In the draft agreements, the United States proposed nuclear-plant safeguards, including in-spection by the IAEA, to prevent the plutonium produced as a byproduct from being diverted to the labrication of atomic weapons. In expressing a willingness to accept future controls, Egypt was reported to have suggested that the international controls should apply to all existing atomic

China Hails Arab Price Rises For Oil as 'Pioneering Action'

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. (UPI).—China today hailed Arab oil price rises as a "his-toric pioneering action" which opened a new dimension for defense of national resources against "imperialist plunder and exploitation."

"In this Middle East war, the Arab countries used oil as a weapon to deal a heavy blow at Zionism and hegemonism" Chiao Kuan-hua, Peking's deputy foreign minister, said in a policy speech to the General Assembly. "This was a historic pioneering action," he said. "Its impact far exceeds the scope of the Arab peoples' anti-imperialist struggle. It has offered up a new dimension for the Third World's struggle in defense of national resources against imperialist plunder and exploita-

Support for Arabs

Mr. Chiao expressed full support for the Arab countries that imposed an oil embargo during last October's Middle East war and then raised oil prices nearly 400 per cent.

He lashed out at both the Soviet Union and the United States and ridiculed the détente between Moscow and Washington. "In the past year, the contention between the two super-powers, the United States and the Soviet Union, for spheres of influence and world hegemony has become more intense," Mr. Chiao said. "This is a fact which no agreements between them can cover up.

"Détente has become a kind of quack medicine hawked by Soviet leadership every-

In his formal address to the annual meeting, Mr. Turner said the new group "should meet regularly and in special session if necessary, maintain a continuing surveillance of the exchange rate system and provide the political forum in which the defenses can be mounted against resort to policies by some member countries that are seriously harmful to "The question of the meshing of countries' fiscal and monetary policies should be high on its cenda." he added.

Both industrialized and developing countries, including the oil exporters, see Canada as a natural choice for leadership because it is an industrial, oil-exporting country which has yet to realize its full economic potential.

The new group replaces the old Committee of 20 finance ministers and central-bank governors formed two years ago by the IMF to reform the world's monetary arrangements.

The Arab oil-exporting countries will be a powerful force in the new interim committee, on which, Mr. Turner noted, they would have two or three seats. Other oil exporters will be repre-

At the same time, Mr. Turner said, there was also every indication that the group of five leading industrial nations was taking seriously the political role of the new international body.

These five—Britain, West Germany, France, Japan and the United States—last weekend discussed the implications of the quadrupling of oil prices over the last year. Monetary sources said their support, coupled with Arab participation, could result in the beginning of a dialogue between oil consumers and producers.

Delegates from the Arab oilexporting countries are taking an active part in private discussions here on how to meet joint economic problems, even though the Organization of Petroleum Exporting countries turned down an IMP invitation to attend the conference as an observer.

Bonn Drops Opposition To 5% Farm Price Rise

Compromise in EEC Crisis

By David Haworth

BRUSSELS, Oct. 2 (IET).foreign ministers late tonight reached agreement on the need to reform the market's Common Agricultural Policy. In return for this accord. Germany lifted its veto on a 5 per cent increase in

The agreement was applauded by all nine ministers. They congratulated themselves on being able to avert a situation that could have caused a crisis in the European Economic Community. The British Foreign Secretary, James Callaghan, said: "I am gratified that we have been able to reach an agreement." The French Agriculture Minister, Christian Bonnet, said: "We are happy about the agreement to institute a stocktaking of the farm policy by the European Commission." He added that he was also pleased that the 5 per cent rise in farm prices would be taken into account in next spring's annual price-fixing negotiations.

Commission Report Ordered

The European Commission was instructed to draw up a report on the achievements and shortcomings of EEC farm policy by March 1.

Thus, the Germans won the conditions they demanded for their assent to the price rise and the eight other member nations were given the price rise that they considered politically vital. All can also look forward to some benefits from the farm policy review that the commission will undertake.

Officials here said it was too early to say what modifications in farm policy would be put forward by the commission, but they were confident that these would be far-reaching.

Teonomic Stability

ister, Josef Ertl, said his government's hard-line attitude toward the farm policy was "an attempt to introduce some economic stability in the community" and to prevent national subsidies from subjecting the EEC's structure to further disintegration

He was supported in this by Mr. Callaghan, who said: "Tonight's meeting represents a dis-tinct advance." He added that there had been "a relative consensus" among the community's ministers, but that some member countries, like Britain and Germany, were naturally more favorable to reforming the farm policy than were the French,

Mr. Bonnet told his colleagues that France was also against subsidies to farmers if they offended the letter and spirit of the EEC Treaty. He accepted a British

By Leonard Silk

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2 (NYT).—Damon Runyon, the great sports writer, once said that where the human race is concerned, the odds are 9-to-5 against. An observer at the current annual meeting of the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund would see no reason to quarrel with that conclusion.

In private conversations here, finance ministers and central bankers, normally given to the softest of euphemisms and the most Pollyannish of prognoses, are expressing grave concern about the dangers facing the world monetary system. Many officials agree that never in the history of these two institutions has anxiety run so high.

The explosive mixture of oil and money is what they are worrying about. Although inflation, in part aggravated by soaring oil prices, is rampant; many officials are concerned that efforts to stop it by clamping down on monetary growth would result in deflation and bring mass unemployment. Individual nations facing mounting balance-ofpayment deficits are being driven to try to increase exports and cut imports in order to conserve foreign-exchange reserves. But the battle to increase exports could lead to international price wars, with falling rather than rising prices. And the drive to curb imports could lead to breakdowns in trade and further damage to national

The question is no longer recognition of the depth and gravity of the danger, but the adequacy of governmental response. It also condemned the Social Democratic call for elections. "It would be a profound mistake to think that dissolving Parliament was a solution—it would just be irresponsible adventurism," the statement said.

Earlier, it had been expected that Mr. Rumor would postpone his expected resignation decision until after a meeting of the Christian Democratic party secretariat next week.

which was developed by Polish firms during previous decades of chronic shortages.

Instead of taking risks that could adversely affect their production, Polish factory managers tend to secure excessive reserves of essential materials. Moreover, such reserves are used by firms to secure hard-to-get commodities through unofficial exchanges, Hoarding practices have con-tributed to distribution difficulties and production bottlenecks.

The problems seem most severe in the automotive field, especially for the Polish Plats that are being mass-produced here. According to Polish press reports, Polish assembly plants now have reserves of some parts sufficient for several years of production.
At the same time, other parts are in very short supply, and

Figt owners must wait for months for spare parts.

A new element in the current campaign is that control commissions are organized by enterprises, rather than imposed by central authorities in Warsaw. The idea behind this innovation is to let local officials put their own houses in order, relinquish excess reserves and send them where they are needed.

It is officially estimated that the nation's total industrial pro-duction will be increased by $2.5 billion for the remainder of 1974 as a result of this action. Industrial Growth

Poland's industrial production during the last four years has been growing by an average of 11 per cent annually, while the nation's trade with the West has also sharply increased. About half of Poland's trade is now with the West, compared with 38 per cent in 1972.

By James M. Markham SAIGON, Oct. 2 (NYT) .-- Opposition politicians reacted today with disappointment and anger to a policy speech last night by President Nguyen Van Thieu. In a two-hour televised talk to the nation, Mr. Thieu said he would ease decrees restricting political activity and press freedom, crack down on official corruption and continue to resist

NEW YORK, Oct. 2 (NYT).-The United States has reportedly put forth specific ideas to the major oil importers to deal with the problems caused by the high costs of oil and help prepare the way for a meeting of consuming and producing countries. West European diplomats and American officials said the ideas were discussed by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and William Simon, the secretary of the Treasury, at last weekend's meetings in Washington of the five major oil consumers—the United States, Britain, France, Japan and West Germany.

The details, which amounted to a follow-up to Sept. 23 speeches in which President Ford and Mr. Eissinger called for reductions in oil prices, have not been made public at the request of the West Europeans and Japanese, who want time to study them first.

Possible Reductions

The purpose of the proposals was to encourage a coordinated Western approach in anticipation of a conference of oil producers and consumers that would discuss a range of problems, including possible price reductions.

The United States hopes that these discussions could lead to greater cooperation and selfreliance among consumers. The American government is studying proposals for conserving energy, and Mr. Simon said yesterday in Washington that Mr. Ford would soon make public proposals for cutting consumption.

Mr. Kissinger organized the two-day meeting because of his reported concern that failure by the Western powers to act decisively could lead to a breakup of the fabric of Western society, including possible Communist takeovers in some countries.

The case that sparked the ambassadorships-for-sale controversy was that of Mrs. Ruth Farkas, who gave $300,000 to the Nixon re-election campaign in 1972 and was nominated to the Luxembourg post early in 1973. In attacking Mr. Flanigan's qualifications for the Madrid post, Sen. Eagleton recited the sworn testimony of President Nixon's former attorney, Herbert sentence. Acting on Mr. Flanigan's instructions, Kalmbach said, he met Mrs. Farkas by arrangement with Rep. Louis Wyman, R-N.H., and discussed the appointment with her. # Ford Pardon Testimony Seen No Precedent

By Lou Cannon and Richard L. Lyons

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2 (WP). -President Ford is to testify Thursday, Oct. 10, before a House subcommittee investigating his pardon of former President Richard Nixon, the subcommittee announced today.

The pardon hearings, which probably will be televised, will take place at 10 a.m. in the same Judiciary Committee room where impeachment charges against the former president were voted two months ago. Mr. Nixon reafter those sessions and Mr. Ford became President.

Mr. Ford, whose decision to grant an unconditional partion to his predecessor stirred a storm controversy, has agreed to answer subcommittee questions about his action, at least 14 of them included in two resolutions of inquiry seeking a full explanation of the pardon.

Subcommittee chairman Wilham Hungate, D-Mo., said that the President will not be asked to take an oath to tell the truth since none of the other witnesse at the current series of hearings have been sworn. Rep. Hungate has been holding hearings on a wide range of bills aimed at ting out the full story of Mr. Nixon's involvement in Watergate and why Mr. Ford pardoned

Statement and Clarification Rep. Hungate said he expected that the format of the hearing would be for Mr. Ford to read a statement and then for members to ask questions.

The subcommittee chairman also indicated that questioning would be limited to the subject matter covered by the questions in two resolutions of inquiry introduced by Reps. Bells. Abeng, D-N.Y., and John Conyers, D-Mich.

Members could question the President on:

Mr. Ford believes he can testify before Congress without setting a damaging precedent that would erode executive powers, White House sources said yesterday. These sources said that after a discussion with his legal advisers, Mr. Ford had become convinced that his testimony would not establish a precedent because he is volunteering to give testimony rather than responding to a congressional request for his appearance. The House Judiciary Subcommittee before which Mr. Ford will testify asked for detailed information about the reasons for the pardon but did not call upon the President to testify. It is this fine line upon which Mr. Ford apparently will rely if he is directly requested in the future to give testimony to Congress, these sources said. White House Press Secretary Ronald Nessen laid the groundwork for policy on possible future requests yesterday when he explained the reasons for Mr. Ford's compliance.

"He's a great believer in the direct approach," Mr. Nessen said. "He feels he is the one who has the best information surrounding his pardon power. He feels he nothing to hide and wants to tell the truth."

The description of the President as the person having "the best information" would apply also to a host of other presidential decisions. Some congressmen and, privately, some White House aides have expressed the belief that Mr. Ford's action, however commendable, could lead to many direct requests for his testimony

Mr. Nessen, without giving any explanation, cartioned reporters on making the assumption that Mr. Ford would testify before Congress on other issues. The last President to appear before a congressional committee was Abraham Lincoln, who volun-

-Secretary of State Henry Kis-singer and CIA Director William Colby have concurred in an unprecedented agreement to share CIA secrets on covert political operations abroad with members of the House Foreign Affairs

At a closed meeting on Capitol Hill last Friday, the two officials also affirmed that no covert operations comparable to those run against the Allende government in Chile were in progress. The assurances stopped short, however, of a guarantee by Mr. Kissinger and Mr. Colby that the agency would not engage in operations against incumbent governments or other political targets.

Until now, the CIA has briefed only a House Armed Services subcommittee, headed by Rep. Lucien Nedzi, D-Mich., on secret political operations abroad. Such briefings also were provided to a Senate Armed Services nittee chaired by Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2 (WP). Chilean coup of September, 1973. Rep. Harrington touched off the recent Chile controversy with his letters demanding further congressional inquiry into U.S. covert activities against the government of the late Mr. Allende. Rep. Harrington released secret CIA testimony on Chile.

Rep. Nedzi, a prime mover in working out the new agreement, said that Mr. Kissinger and Mr. Colby also had provided assurances that the congressional subcommittees would be briefed on any pending covert activities before they were undertaken. "No-body said, 'We're going to give you veto power,'" Rep. Nedzi commented. "But my understanding is that we would be told before rather than after." Panel Decisions

The Michigan Democrat, who has said that he disapproved of the Chilean operations, said the understanding with Mr. Colby and Mr. Kissinger covered decisions of the Committee of 40 of the National Security Council. It was unclear whether corresponding arrangement was being considered in the Senate where information on covert action is restricted to the Senate Armed Services Committee.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2 (WP).

President Ford's proclamation of conditional amnesty for thousands of draft dodgers and deserters of the Vietnam war has raised the question for military commanders of what would happen if the United States went to war again

If a new crisis demanded that the current volunteer force be expanded with reservists and a resumption of the draft, the commanders wonder if large numbers of young men would evade ser-vice, believing another clemency would be declared when fighting ended

A number of senior officers said in recent interviews that it undoubtedly would depend upon the kind of war or crisis that the United States was facing at the

Another Feeling

But there was also a feeling that the conditional amnesty would not hurt the military. Some, in fact, view the plan as fitting into a healthy and hopefully long-lasting consensus of both military and civilian opinion that a repeat of anything like the Vietnam war must be avoided at all costs.

"We just must never do that again, unless everybody is for it and knows what he's doing," a senior general said.

"The heart of the question about whether young men will answer the call in the future," said another general, "lies in the way we go to war. If you fix your eye on the way we go to war, and if you fix that, then the rest of the problems will take care of themselves.

"The core of the problem is the undeclared war like Vietnam and that is why the amnesty proposals are so appropriate. Hopefully, we have learned our lesson; that you can't go to war without the voice of the people

"If that is done," the general

Turkish Aid Squabble

ttary aid to Turkey-President Ford declares, threatening a veto-would "destroy any hope" that American diplomacy could help ease the Cyprus crisis. Perhaps so. It is indeed in foreign policy terms, a definite gamble that the Senate has taken. The Turks, in angry reaction, could yet take steps which they—as well as the Americans would regret. The Congress, if the Senate's stronger language on an aid cutoff is af-Tirmed by the House, would have to accept due responsibility for the consequences.

Yet the Senate had no proper alternative. Turkey had grossly abused American aid which is meant only for purposes of NATO defense to impose its will on Cyprus. Congress, knowing full well that under American law the aid should therefore be halted, nonetheless gave the administration nearly two months to undo the damage. But in this grace period, the administration failed: Turkey apparently did not take seriously American urgings to roll back its troops on Cyprus. Meanwhile, the aid bill came along on the congressional calendar, and the Turkish issue could no longer be blinked. By better than 3 to 1, the House voted to halt aid until "substantial progress" on Cyprus had been made. By almost the same large margin, the Senate voted to cut off aid at once. Any other outcome would have meant an abject surrender of Congress's responsibility to see that its laws are enforced.

In an extraordinary case, it might be argued that the foreign policy stakes required Americans to keep looking the other way. But this is not such a case. Here. American diplomacy helped produce a calamity which it has been quite unable to rectify. A cynic, hearing the Ford-Kissinger protest against an aid cutoff, might even wonder if the administration were not ready to lay

The Eagleton amendment cutting off mil- blame for the Cyprus fiasco on the Congress. In this instance, administration diplomacy has not been so conspicuously effectivequite the contrary-that "congressional diplomacy" must be dismissed before it is tried.

> Let us concede the possibility, however, that there may be a reasonable case for leaving a certain discretion on aid in the President's hands Suppose it were his best judgment, for instance, that a congressional aid cutoff would not only undercut a Cyprus settlement but spin Turkey out of the Western orbit into a new partnership with Arab radicals or Russians or whomever. Perhaps it is wrong to figure that a Turkish government suddenly shorn of its American arms would have the equanimity to explain to its people that the cutoff expressed merely an internal American problem, a curious fixation on respecting law, rather than hostlity to Turkey or to Turkish Cypriots.

In such circumstances, the administration's correct course would be to carry its anxieties candidly to the Congress and not just secretly to a few sympathetic leadersand to ask legislators to consider an appropriate change in the law. The effort would no doubt be awkward, both procedurally and diplomatically, but it could not be nearly so awkward and so destructive to American politics and American diplomacy as the course the administration has already embarked on. As between foreign sensibilities and democratic procedures, if that is part of the choice, why must it always be the latter which are expected to bend for the good of the nation? The curse of the Nixon administration lay in its repeated attempts to spare itself the rigors of the democratic process and to take shortcuts, for presidential purposes, outside the law. It is inconceivable to us that the Ford administration would want to start down the same

Havana Caper

The restoration of normal relations with Cuba is something this newspaper has long advocated; but we don't think Sen. Javits's and Sen. Pell's weekend in Havana was a yery good way of furthering that goal.

Last Friday, the two senators, one a New York Republican and the other a Rhode Island Democrat, accompanied by a large party of journalists, flew to Cuba in a kind of spectacular with Marxist-Leninist variations. The visitors dined at a restaurant that had been a favorite of the late Ernest Hemingway, watched a song-and-dance show, and attended an open-air block party given by a neighborhood "Committee for the Defense of the Revolution" whose task is to maintain ideological vigilance throughout

Finally, the two senators dined with Premier Castro and issued a joint statement expressing their belief that he really is "interested in working toward better relations with the United States."

Was this trip necessary? Was it in the hest interests of the United States? Two senatorial free lancers cannot conduct diplomacy. But they can complicate the work of the responsible officials who do conduct foreign relations. The United States and Cuba appear to be slowly drifting toward a resumption of diplomatic relations or at least a marked lessening of overt hostility, but serious differences remain.

When prominent members of the Senate include themselves in negotiations, they may inadvertently encourage a foreign government in the belief that it has more bargaining leverage than it actually possesses or, even worse, that it can appeal over the head of the U.S. government to the Congress and the American people. That is not a promising prescription for the conduct of a success-

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The Calley Case, Again

The first thing to be said about Judge Robert Elliott's decision overturning the conviction of William Calley jr. is that the government ought to appeal it. The issues raised by the case are so important and the judge's opinion so sweeping that the matter cannot be allowed to rest where it is. Regardless of how one feels about the fairness of the situation in which Calley now finds himself or the Calley case as such, the legal ramifications of Judge Elliott's opinion are too great to go unchallenged.

Take, for example, his finding that Calley was denied a fair trial because of the publicity that surrounded the massacre at My Lai When other judges have ruled that publicity interfered with a fair trial, they have limited their findings to the prejudice created in the minds of the particular jury that tried the case and have pointed out ways in which that kind of prejudice could be avoided at a new trial. Not content with such a finding, Judge Elliott held that there was no way in which the military courts could protect Calley's rights. This means. simply, that the military courts are unable to try any defendant whose case draws the kind of publicity that Calley's did. Such a ruling is, to be kind about it, novel.

Equally novel was Judge Elliott's handling of the question of whether Calley's rights were violated when the House Armed Services Committee refused to turn over a report of its investigation into the My Lai affair. The judge said his answer (in Calley's favor) to the question was "obvious and easy" because of the Supreme Court's recent ruling against executive privilege in the White House tapes case. If we read the tapes decision correctly the answer is a little harder than that. The Supreme Court specifically did not decide this question in the tapes case and the elements of the two cases are quite different.

We raise these two examples not to argue that Judge Elliott should have left the verdict in the Calley case standing but to explain why his decision must be appealed. And these are not the only reasons. It is not at all clear that a federal district judge is entitled to review a court-martial conviction as thoroughly as Judge Elliott did this one. Nor is it clear that he is right on the law in some other aspects of his opinion.

As much as many persons would like to put the Calley case out of mind and thus continue to close the book on the Vietnam war, it will have to be with us for a while. The legal issues raised are too important to be disposed of in the manner of Judge Elliott's decision.

NEW YORK.—In the normal switch from one American president to another, the new man has about 10 weeks between election and inauguration to figure out where he's going and who's going with him, but Gerald Ford was an instant president who had to put the ball in the air before anybody knew the signals.

The result has been about what might have been expected from any new football coach: A lot of cautious plunges and dust along the line, a few broken plays, and plenty of locker room speeches. Now, however, the exhibition is over, and the gap between the problem and the performance is clear. Secretary of State Kissinger, both in Washington and at the United Nations, is defining the problem of the modern world in the most solemn, even in spocalyptic terms. but so far there are no policies to meet his perception of the pblem of inflation, and ev body is "waiting for Jerry."

Hard Questions

What will he do? How can a conservative, partisan politician, even with the best of intentions and diverted by serious personal problems within his own family, handle radical world problems that require unpopular political remedies? These are the hard questions now, and even with the greatest sympathy for the President, they cannot be evaded.

Secretary Kissinger, if we un-derstand his argument to the President, the Cabinet, the officials here at the UN in New York. is saying that democracy as we have known it in this century cannot survive the present rate of inflation for more than three or four years. If the people, the parties, and governments of the free world do not cooperate and sacrifice to get this inflation by the throat, the result will be economic, financial, and political anarchy-with authoritarian governments of the right or leftand Western civilization will be transformed beyond the desires or imagination of the leaders now

Obviously, there are tactical political and diplomatic reasons for this melancholy Kissinger theme. The inflation cannot be turned around by a single party or a single nation. It is a world problem demanding policies no party or nation likes, and Kissinger is trying to startle people into reality but he is also talking as an historian, who knows some-

Berlin Success Story 18

- By Robert Kleiman

BERLIN-The one piece of encouraging news that can be reported from a Europe heading into a winter of discontent-marked by inflation, social tension and political instability—is that West Berlin is alive and well and still prospering 110 miles inside East

The former capital of the German Reich, for two decades the most dangerous flash point of the cold war, now has only one cross to bear-boredom. Since 1972, the city's status has been stabilized by the Berlin settlement concluded by the Soviet Union, the United States, Britain and France, which has turned West Berlin into a haven of peace and quiet, the showplace of detente.

Berliners hesitate to be too pleased about it. They were concerned in 1972 that the outside world would pay less and less attention to their problems as they disappeared from the front pages. They feared a Soviet waiting game that would see West Berlin gradually turn into a forgotten city that, defended by no one, would ultimately fall into Communist hands. But so far, the four-power agreement has hought instead a vast improvement in the city's status and

Brief Storm

The brief storm stirred up in July over Bonn's environmental agency blew over quickly, as Soviet diplomats had hinted in advance, after East Germany slowed traffic on the autobahn for six days. The improvement in access to West Berlin remains the most visible gain of the Berlin accords.

Road travel between West Berlin and West Germany has increased by two-thirds in the last two years—and air travel has fallen off 23 per cent. "I never dared make the trip by road until 1972," said a university professor. "Now I drive every time." For the first time in 30 postwar years, there is a written commitment by the Russians to "unimpeded" access to Berlin for German civilians as well as the Western allies.

A West Berliner can now drive to West Germany in two hours for a weekend visit, and many do. The East Germans, with the efficiency that is a national characteristic, have put in as many as ten lanes at their check points to handle peak vacation traffic. It is as painless as the toll booth on an American expressway.

Travelers do not have to get out of their cars, which are virtually never searched. Nor are trucks which traverse East Germany sealed by Western customs officers.

Travel to visit relatives in East Berlin and East Germany, permitted for up to 30 days a year, involves red tape and costs that are controversial. #### Compromise Bill On Abortion to Be Put Before Swiss

GENEVA, Oct. 2 (NYT):-A sharply divided Swiss Cabinet has reached a compromise on a hill that would permit abortions for other than medical reasons.

The seven-man Cabinet's middle-of-the-road decision on the issue is expected, however, to re-kindle a bitter national debate that will probably be settled only by a national referendum.

Those who favor a more liberal abortion bill were dismayed because the government law would continue to deny women the right to have a pregnancy interrepted on demand.

Conservatives are equally dismayed because the bill would liberalize the present law, which bens all abortions other than those certified by a state-appoint-ed expert as endangering the life of the expectant nother.

Mr. Marinatos, who in 1967 discovered on Santorin Island a Minoan city buried under the purnice of a volcanic explosion, was supervising excavations at the Bronze Age site.

Mr. Marinatos called the site "a prehistoric Pompeii" because of the good condition of most the ruins, preserved by a covering of ashes for 3,500 years. He proposed, in a theory first published in 1939, that the errotion on Santorin destroyed the Minoan civilization on the island of Crete, More recently other scholars have suggested that Santorin (ancient Thera) was the legendary Atlantis.

The subcommittee, headed by Rep. Clement Zahlocki, D-Wis., is exploring how to strengthen the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) in shaping U.S. negotiating strategy. The agency, Rep. Mr. Bundy said the socalled purge amounted to "a kind of surrender" to "important people on Capitol Hill"-an allusion to supporters of the Defense De-

"The administration owes a great obligation of openness" to the Congress and the public, said Mr. Bundy, the president of the Ford Foundation If the provision of facts to Congress is looked on by an administration "as an act of disloyalty," Mr. Bundy said, "then we have real trouble."

The ACDA "is at present in a badly weakened position," Mr. Bundy said, "because over the last two years it has been the victim of grave failures" at two key points—"it has not had the strong and dedicated support of the President and his top advisers, and its staff strength has severely declined."

Texas Device Said to Create Heat of 200 Million Degrees

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2 (WP). -Momentary temperatures of 200 million degrees have reportedly been reached in the laboratories of the University of Texas. This would be the highest heat achiev-

most skeptical."

The experiments were performed with a machine known as the Texas tokomak. They involved heating a heavy hydrogen, or deuterium, plasma, or ionized gas, with electricity. A tokomak is a doughnut-shaped device that contains the plasma within a magnetic field, which serves to keep the heat away from the walls of the device.

One of several tokomaks in the United States, the $4-million Texas machine is the first to reach what are considered to be "fusion" temperatures of 100 million degrees or more. These are the temperatures required to sustain a fusion reaction, in which atoms join together and release energy in a way that is opposite to that of an atom of uranium splitting in an atomic power

"We believe it, it's real," said an AEC nuclear physicist, who did not want to be identified. "They bave repeated their experiments often enough to convince the

Despite the milestone of the 200-million-degree temperature in Texas, most scientists believe that controlled fusion power is 25 years away. Researchers must still find a way to sustain the heat for as long as one second and then find electricity in a fusion power plant. "I would call the Texas achievement a milestone. but not a breakthrough," is the way it was put by Dr. Robert Kirsch, who directs fusion research for the AEC, "I would define a breakthrough as an event that changes the trend of things and a milestone as a useful and significant step along the trend of things." University of Texas . physicist William Drummond said yester-day that the Texas tokomak (so named for a Soviet device that was the first to demonstrate high plasma heats: has achieved 200-million-degree temperatures many times a day for the last four months. Mr. Drummond said the tokomak had been operating at these super heats without interruption since last spring.

Magnetic Bottle The tokomak acts like a giant magnetic bottle, in which a light gas such as hydrogen is heated until it becomes a plasma of fastmoving free electrons and ions. Magnetic coils keep the plasma moving in one direction around the doughnut-like container. The Texas tokomak achieved the 200-million-degree mark by the use of something called "turbulent" heating, in which a charge of 250,000 volts or more is passed into the plasma when it has bunched up at one side of the tokomak

This bunching of the plasma is the direct result of a plasma in-stability which scientists have only begun to understand. The sudden surge of power into the bunched-up plasma causes the electrons to move at incredible speeds, which is the source of the 200-million-degree heat, which lasts, perhaps for less than 100 millionths of a second, then dis-

Fusion is seen as the ultimate energy source, cheap and free of most pollution, except heat. Its fuel is deuterium, an isotope of hydrogen so abundant that a pitcher of water could energize a home for a year.

So that is why lips move

It is no accident that 'deaf and dumb' are so often used as though they were a single word. A child who cannot hear, cannot learn to speak in the normal way. Dumbness was once an inevitable corollary of early deafness; now special teaching methods are breaking that association. For children who are not totally deaf hearing aids hold out the children do, but of full participation in classroom teaching as well. There is no need for them to sit bunched round the teacher; no need for the other children to be unnaturally hushed. The teacher speaks into a microphone that feeds a loop of wire round the room. The children switch their hearingaids to pick up the fluctuating magnetic field

1 The PIP system (Programmed Individual Presentation) enables a student or trainee to learn at his or her own speed. In fact a PIP teaching programme is a 30-minute sound movie viewed on a projector (Cassettescope) that any student can learn to play forward and back in a few minutes. The programmes are in cassettes so there is no threading and no risk of damage.

2 With a video cassette recorder any T.V. becomes a teaching machine - but one with enormal advantage over the crude projectors with which programmed learning began. It can of course present textual matter as well as any other system but it can also present moving pictures with synchronised sound. This is its great advantage over tape- and slide systems.

3 The Video 10 system is a two-camera mini-studio aimed primarily at schools and industrial training centres, enabling students to produce their own TV programmes. it comprises the TV cameras with accessories, the monitors, video mixer, control unit and audio mixer, microphone and head sets as will as power supply units, tripod and cables. A video cassette recorder can also be used so that complex teaching programmes can be prepared and recorded in advance.

4 Language laboratories allow each student to work at his own speed. In the past, many students (adults as well as children) found the difficulties of handling of reel-to-reel tape left little time for learning. The Philips compact cassette has cured that. The tape is never exposed, and can't get into frustrating kinks and can't be damaged.

An Improbable Life Story

By Hebe Dorsev

PARIS, Oct. 2 (IHT).—"When I left the Sunday Times, after nearly 17 years, my one wonder was how I got there to the first place."

That opening line of "With Tongue in Chic' (to be published Oct. 27 by Michael John, London, £3.50), pretty much sums up Ernestine Carter's story. Her autobiography tells the improbable story of a woman from America's Deep South whose first career was in the world of art and who ended up in England, not only reporting on fashion but earning an international reputation while doing it.

As women's editor of the Sunday Times from 1955 until 1972, Mrs. Carter not only carved a respected niche for herself but for English fashion as well. When she started on her career in fashion, England was a desert as far as the rest of the world was concerned, and British fashion reporters were treated as secondcitizens shroad - while American journalists got first-

"This discrimination irked me, perhans because I am an American," she writes. "and I became determined to gain equal recog-nition for the British press."

A Description

Mrs. Carter, who doesn't like being called "petite," is just that. She always wore a crisp dress, a nillbox hat and nest white gloves. But her eyes, sharp and witty, give away that slightly starched Southern belle appearance and she had a way of her own of summing up a fashion collection in one devasting sen-

Actually, only half the book is about fashion. The first part tells of Mrs. Carter's interest in art which led her to the Museum of Modern Art in New York where she became curator of Architectural and Industrial Art.

A trip to London to study modern architecture eventually led to her meeting and marrying an English rare book expert, Jake Carter, and into a British

A few chapters, devoted to wartime London, are full of anecdotes. One recalls her meetings with Gen. Charles de Gauile at the Connaught Hotel, "a very tall French officer, accompanied by two aides of normal size on either side, like ornaments on a chimney piece. With Gallic courtesy, he always saluted me and smiled. One day, one of the aides approached me, and bowing, said: May I present the general's compliments. He greatly admires your hats and would be glad if you would join him for a drink." The general," Mrs. Carter adds, "was charming."

It was the war, Mrs. Carter writes, "that bent my distaff in the direction of fashion, scarcely a result to be expected."

Her first brush with fashion came when she was asked by the British Ministry of Information to help with an exhibition called "Britain Can Make It." To her dismay, she found herself in the fashion section and "frankly, 1

Soon after, she joined the staff of Harner's Bazzar, expecting to be features editor. When she discovered she was to be fashion editor she was "appalled."

But by and by, she managed and tells the story of her early baffling days with the French conture and the first "unforgettable" Dior collection, the New Look

"To us," she writes, "in our sharp-shouldered (a legacy from Schiaparelli), skimpy fabric-rationed suits, this new softness and roundness was positively voluptuous." Her main problem was to make fashion copy acceptable in England, which was still under rationing and "where the Board of Trade, sharing Sir Stafford Cripps's austere views, was highly suspicious of fashion. Dior's New Look was to them the work of the Devil." After that, she left fashion for a while to be with her husband, who had taken a job in Washington for the British Foreign Office, But in 1955, her husband was asked to join Sotheby's auction house and Mrs. Carter was back in England-where she became the Sunday Times's woman's page editor.

From Then On

From then on Mrs. Carter took as much interest in fashion as she had done in art, Her former career was obvious in the care she took in the design of her pages, "My greatest pals were the printers," she writes, "Complete professionals, fantastic technicians . . they helped me break the corsets of inflexible layouts."

Her first days at the Sunday Times, which then belonged to Lord Kemsley, were anything but rosy. In her first column, a love letter to England on coming back after three years, she referred to England a: "my country-in-law" after which Lord Kemsley pounded on his desk and cried: "My God, I've hired a foreigner." But years later, in Lord Kemsley's shareholders' report before he sold the paper, "he listed me among the assets."

Mrs. Carter's talent was all the more remarkable because, while she came to like fashion (which she treated as a sociological phenomenon), she never went overboard in print

"I admire Mrs. Vreeland (Diana Vreeland, former editor of American Vogue) she writes, "for her dedication to fashion but I cannot imagine myself saying, as she is quoted, that the bikini is the most important thing since the atom bomb,"

She was also quick to realize that the fashion scene was becoming international "The 50s had widened the fashion scene," and she started covering Dublin. Rome and Florence as well as Paris

In that section, she recalls how Pucci was introduced both to fashion and to fame right after World War II when American photographer Toni Frissell spot-

Of Mila Schon, she writes that "she appeared on the runway, mostly known for what could politely be called 'a rich excess." But Mrs. Carter's most interesting contribution to the fashion world was that she was probably the first to recognize and encourage British talents, many of whom soon became known throughout the world. With her authority, she kept promoting Mary Quant, Jean Muir, Gina Frattini, Bill Gibb and John

Bates. By creating the Sunday Times International Fashion Awards (in 1963) she helped establish London as a fashion center. And in the '60s, British fashion was the fashion. As she reports: "There was no need to go abroad for news. London was hopping with Mary Quant had opened the door to a new freedom for the young. Talent was popping all over the place, crying for recognition and encouragement," Eventually, Mrs. Carter added

the United States to her fashion route. About Neiman Marcus, she writes: "Into Neiman Marcus Texas pours its liquid gold. Oil walks in and mink walks out."
Of Mainbocher, who did the Duchess of Windsor's wedding dress: "He delivered his message in a whisper."

By the time she left the Sunday Times, she was an associate edi-tor, had made Queen Elizabeth's honors list and had won many foreign awards for services to fashion, However, one has the impression that she might not want to do it all over again. Early in the book, she talks about her years at the Modern

Museum of Art and writes: "The years at the museum had been so dazzling that ever afterward I have felt like Alfred de Musset, about whom some contemporary wit remarked: There goes a man with his future behind him"

OPERA IN LONDON

Predictably 'Different' Wagner

By Henry Pleasants

LONDON, Oct. 2 (IHT).—In the year history, opera has been dominated successively by singers, composers, conductors and, in the past 25 years, by producers.

The pre-eminent role of the producer began in the early fifties when Wieland Wagner, at Bayreuth, decided to bring his grandfather's operas and music dramas up to date by a kind of interpretive, exegetical and didactic production quite independent of traditional procedure and deflant of the composer's own abundant and explicit stage

At about the same time, Walter Folsenstein adopted a similar approach to the operas of other composers at the Komische Oper in East Berlin. Among his associates was Goetz Priedrich, whose own "Tannhäuser" achieved a great success by being boosd at Bayreuth two years ago, and whose new staging of Wagner's "Ring" is the principal new pro-duction of the Royal Opera's 1974-75 season,

Season Opened

That season opened at Covent Garden Monday night with "Das Rheingold," followed last night by "Die Walklire." "Siegfried" and "Götterdämmerung" will follow in April, all conduced by Colin Davis, with stage designs by Joseph Sychods, costumes by Ingrid Rosell and lighting by William Bundy.

Both "Das Rheingold" and "Die Walklire" proved to be characteristically and predictably "different," with the former the more damaged by capricious in-novation. One of the tedious clichés of contemporary production is universality, and so we have the familiar basic set, square now instead of round, and subject to fashionable tilting. The costumes range in period from space ago through commedia. dell'arte to Tudor to primeval. ple, Alberich and Mime appear in ministrel-show blackfore image of Amos 'n' Andy. Instead of a flickering Loge we have something closer to Sportin' Life, sauntering cynically and ar-rogantly. The giants are spacemen armed with ray guns, the gods are fops, and Freis a well padded Mae West. And so on. "Die Walkure" fares better, despite eccentric costuming, if only because mountain scenery lends itself less reluctantly to fanciful staging, although the ride of the Valkyries is a ludicrous disaster. The most satisfactory episode of the two evenings was the second act of "Die Walkire," where the lengthy dialogues frustrate even a modern producer's determination to get in the composer's way. Most exasperating in both pro-ductions is the visual assistance Friedrich and his associates give to Wagner's preludes and interludes, where projected and protracted light shows distract the attention from the most vividly Musicative music of the year. Britain's current account deficit which includes both trade and invisibles such as insurance, shipping, and banking, totaled nearly $6.8 billion in the first nine months. For reserves to have increased by $894 million, there must have been an inflow of capital near $7.5 billion.

Part of Britain's inflow of capital came from official bor-rowing in the Eurodollar market under the Treasury's foreign-exchange guarantee program. That amount totaled about $2.2 billion in the first nine months, which left about $5.3 billion of other capital inflows.

Obviously, some sterling payments are converted into other currencies, but conversion out of sterling requires a conscious decision on the part of oil-money managers, and London has the best developed money market in Another advantage of investing in sterling is that interest rates have been higher than for most other currencies. Also certain oil producers receive a British exchange-rate guarantee on part of their sterling balances, and Britain's huge North Sea oil reserves provide assurance that

According to some estimates, the oil producers will have about $25 billion or so to invest in industrial nations in the fourth quarter.

The reason is that commercial banks operating in the Eurodollar market have begun to turn away oil money because their capital bases are insufficient to accommodate a huge increase in

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Japan Banks Act on Auto Firm

Sumitomo Bank and Sumitomo Trust & Banking Co. plan to strengthen their position in Toyo Kogyo Co. by naming two officials to become executives at the alling auto firm, Japan's sole producer of rotary-engined cars. The two banks have about 100 billion yen (about $336 million) in loans outstanding to Toyo Kogyo and its subsidiaries. The officials are expected to join the board at the company's annual meeting in December. A Toyo Kogyo spokesman says that sales are likely to decline by 5 per cent to about 255 billion yen in the latest six months of the fiscal year but pre-tax profits before special items are expected to fall to near zero from the 6.18 billion yen earned in the six months ended April 30. The company has already announced that it plans to reduce its dividend for the half-year from the 4 yen paid

Third-Quarter Eurocurrency Credits Syndicated medium-term Eurocurrency bank credits totaled about $3.5 billion in the third quarter, down from $5.3 billion in the second quarter and a record $10.5 billion in the opening three months of the year, according to estimates of International Insider, a weekly news-letter on the Euromarkets. In the first nine months, syndicated credits of $19.3 billion were about 128 per cent higher than credits of $8.45 billion m the 1973 period. MGM May Go 'Semi-Private'

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer could go "semi-private" as the result of a plan to exchange any and all outstanding common shares for a new issue of Class B common that would be callable at $25 a share. The proposed offer-subject to stockholder approval—could result in the delisting of the stock from the New York Stock Exchange because too few shares would be publicly held. MGM, which now gets the lion's share of its profits from the 10-month-old MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas, also will purchase for $500 cash each $1,000 principal amount of its 5 per cent convertible debentures currently trading at about $400—a potential cash outlay of $11 mil-lion. Citing the "undervalued" price of MGM -currently around $15-an MGM spokesman says directors believe that the best return on the company's capital would be obtained by the exchange offer. The Class B stock would have the same voting and dividend rights as the common but would be redeemable on a prorata basis semi-annually at $25 a share. MGM would be obligated to devote at least 90 per cent of its net profits after Sept. 1, 1974 to retiring such stock. Kirk Kerkorian, chief executive officer and majority shareholder of MGM. "expects to participate" in the proposed exchange, "although he has reached no decision as yet as to the extent of such participation." In any event, he does not "contemplate that such participation would affect" his control position. The offer is not expected to be made officially until early next year.

Australia May Aid Leyland

The Australian government is considering giving assistance to Leyland Motor Corp. of Australia, an affiliate of British Leyland Motor Corp. According to acting Prime Minister Jim Cairns, "Certain proposals have been put by Levland to the government and we are giving consideration to them. If they are accepted it will involve some assistance." Industry sources say Leyland told the government that, for financial reasons, it may have to cut its operations to assembling cars from knocked-down parts and concentrate on its profitable imports of luxury British cars. This could lead to a severe cut in its 5,000-man workforce.

Minister of Mines Valentin Hernandez told newsmen yesterday that the increase amounting to 3 1,2 per cent-was aimed at the "excess profits" that Exxon, Gulf, Shell and other foreign oil companies are making. He said the levy would cut their profits from 61 cents a barrel to 21 cents.

"The new tax increase has nothing to do with President Ford's warning on oil prices, but is in line with the recent decitroleum Exporting Countries," Mr. Hernandez declared.

Crisis Is Facing Wall Street As Brokers, Investors Flee

NEW YORK, Oct. 2 (AP-DJ). The New York securities industry, faced with a drop in volume and stock-price doldrums, has lost a large part of its chief assets—people, brokerage houses and capital. Member firms of the New York Stock Exchange have lost more than 3.000 fulltime securities salesmen this year, dropping the total to 33,000, down from the peak of 50,000 in the late 1960s. The exchange now has 512 member firms, down from 523 at

Chase Reports Bond Account Was Overstated

NEW YORK, Oct. 3 (WP). -A senior vice-president of Chase Manhattan Bank was fired today after the discovery that the bond trading department he headed had made false reports on the value of the securities it held. David Rockefeller, chairman, said the reports over-stated the value of the account by $34 million and were the result of "extremely serious errors in judgment." Sources in Wall Street said that the false reports apparently were filed to cover up the losses in the trading account and do not appear serious enough to affect the 1969. The shrinkage is expected to continue in coming months. The estimates of future brokerage-firm disappearances range from 50 to 200. Most industry leaders predict a decrease; they differ only on the extent of it. Some 435 Big Board firms surveyed monthly by the exchange have lost a total of $75 million for the first seven months this year, after a $49.1 million less for all of 1973. But that is only the tip of Wall Street's capital loss this year says Donald Mar-ron, president of Mitchell, Hutchins Inc., and also a member of the NYSE board.

Big Board houses have lost almost $400 million in capital in 1974's first seven months, he estimates, a 10 percent drain from the $3.79 billion in capital they held at year-end. The main causes of the industry's price and volume decline, it is generally agreed, are the continuing steep inflation and high interest rates. All this comes at a time when the industry is faced with the greatest internal upheaval : its history. The Securites and Exchange Commission has demanded that stock exchanges adopt a fully competitive system of brokerage fees by May 1, and has warned that if the exchanges do not make the necessary rule changes by the end of next month, it will force the changes itself. American Exchange, saying it will not make the changes voluntarily, has requested an agency hearing The odds are that the issue will eventually be fought in court, industry leaders say,

A few words to the wise, on doing better business in the Far East.

The Wisdom of the East is proverbial.

Translate the expression reproduced above, for example, and it comes out as, "Call Grindlays - quick".

Good advice to anyone who's looking to succeed in the increasingly wealthy and developing markets of the Far East; because the National and Grindlays Bank Group has made for itself, not so much a name, as half a dozen.

There are Grindlays branches or offices in Hong Kong, Tokyo, Kuala Lumpur and Jakarta.

And the Grindlays Bank Group includes in Hong Kong the Dao Heng Bank, Grindlays Dao Heng Finance and Brandts Asia Pacific Shipping Finance; Asian International Merchant Bankers Berhad in Kuala Lumpur, Brandts in Singapore and Genbancor Development Corporation in the Philippines.

The whole adding up to a financial group with a literally unique range of services and depth of experience to offer anyone doing business of any kind in the area.

The Far East is only one of the areas in which the Grindlays Bank Group provides services to international business - from merchant banking to market information and high-level contact with potential customers or suppliers.

" is the message she eventually decided she was trying to convey in "Admissions: Notes From a Woman Psychiatrist." And "something like that" is certainly what comes across in this slice of psychiatric life by a young resident in a New York City hospital. If one brings to this book any vestige of the stereotyped assumption that psy-chiatrists are people somehow set apart from the tumult of daily living, and superqualified to judge the lives of others, why then one is almost bound to come away from this book wondering who will psychoanalyze the psychiatrists.

Occasionally, she'll experience a minor triumph, such as when she skillfully coaxes a stubborn catatonic into eating a meal on her own. For many years it has been a trick, he won with the acc case of Italy first, North America second and the rest nowhere in world standings. But there are signs that this dominance of the big two will soon end.

Brazil is becoming harder and harder to best, and some European countries, notably Sweden, France and Britain, can put together teams of the highest class. A portent of things to come was noted in the World Open Pair Championships in May, where a young British pair, Robert Sheehan and Irving Rose, outdistanced the field in the three days of qualifying play.

They have qualified to play in the European championships in Tel Aviv in November. With their experienced teammates they may well take the European title and if they finish second to Italy, the reigning world titleholders, they will still qualify for the world team championship in Bermuda in January.

Rose demonstrated his cardreading expertise on the diagramed deal from the British trials, Looking at the North-South hands, one would wish to play six diamonds, which has about a 59 per cent chance. Pive diamonds is a virtual certainty, but the three no-trump contract actually reached is far from secure. However, it is hard to fault the bidding, and most expert pairs would reach the same contract.

West led the club ace, and Rose, as South, correctly inferred that West must have length and strength in clubs to lead the suit bid on his right. There was some indication that the diamond length was on his right, so when a heart was led at the second

MONTREAL, Oct. 2 (NYT) .-- A two-run homer by Mike Jorgensen of the Montreal Expos in the eighth inning sank the St. Louis Cardinals, 3-2, last night and dimmed their chances for a National League East Division championship. With the Pittsburgh Pirates overcoming the Chicago Cubs. 5-5, the Cardinals were one game behind the Pirates with only one game left for each club.

Until the big blow by the first baseman, the Cardinals were hurrying to victory behind the nonstop pitching of Bob Gibson, the speed of Bake McBride, the slugging of Reggie Smith and some sparkling fielding by Ted Sizemore and Mike Tyson. The game lasted 1 hour 39 min-

more time. Gibson and Mike Torrez, the Expos' starter, sailed along in the wintry 40-degree weather. The Cards had taken a 1-0 lead in the fourth when Smith smacked a wrong-field homer into the leftfield stands, but the Expos tled

Bob Bailey led off with a double to right-center and scored on two ground outs. Gibson gave up his fourth and fifth hits that same inning but stranded the pair by striking out Barry Foote.

McBride, the outstanding rookle ed first base on a fielder's choice in the seventh and proceeded to steal his way around to third. The steals were his 29th and 30th. Mike Tyson's single scored Mc-Bride with what looked like the run St. Louis needed to win. But Gibson, who was rolling along on a five-hitter, rolled off the shelf. With two outs in the eighth, Willie Davis bounced one up the middle for a hit and stole second—unnecessarily, as it turned out. Jargensen drove his 11th something new to put on the St. homer over the right-field fence.

"It was a fastball belt-high," said Ted Simmons, the Cardinal catcher. "I didn't think it would make it over, but I guess I was Pele's Career really just hoping it wouldn't." Red Schoendienst, the Cardinal To End on Field manager, looked downcast. "What can I say?" he said. "I was thinking of bringing in (Al) Hrabosky (the Cards' top reliever), Garvey doubled home one run and Crawford singled in another as the Dodgers took a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Garvey's 200th hit of the year, a single, moved a runner to third base in the third inning and Crawford knocked him in with a grounder.

Pinch-hitters Rick Anerbach and Lee Lacy drove in two more runs with singles in the sixth. Mike Marshall relieved winner Don Sutton after the fifth and allowed four runs on two hits and four walks. left fielder who wants to be trad-ed unless he plays every day. "But now I'm conceding. It's nothing to hang our heads about. We were out of it in midsummer. Time after time we'd pull it out and win fantastic games." The Yankees, who had trailed both the Boston Red Sox and the Orioles during the chase for the title, stayed in hot pursuit by winning 28 of 33 games down the home-stretch. When last night's game started, they realized that the Orioles had won again in Detroit and held a 1 1/2-game lead with 1 1/2 days to go.

But they fought off the Brewers for nearly eight innings, taking a 2-0 lead in the seventh off Kevin Kobel, a red-haired rookie lefthander who had beaten them three times but hadn't won in five weeks. Then the Brewers evened the game in the eighth and won it in the 10th after a leadoff double by Jack Lind, a rookie shortstop.

It was a mean line drive over first base and it hurt because Lind had been called up by the Brewers three weeks ago from a construction job in Arizona and had been to bat only 11 times in the big leagues when he put Medich in serious trouble. Playing for the deciding run, the Brewers had John Vukovich bunt Lind to third. Then the Yankees huddled at the mound to decide what to do. They de-

Britain Boasts a Newly Titled Man

PARIS, Oct. 2 (IHT) .- The trio of imports walked into the ring, danced a little, dodged a punch two and then conveniently lost to Britain's best. Jorge Ahumada was not so accommodating. He swung wide and hard, and put a few lumps on the smooth face of John Conteh, but was not able to damage the pride and prestige of the rising fortunes of British boxing.

England, which has four European champions, has a world title-holder in Conteh, who came away from last night's battle with a 15-round decision over Ahumada—s New York-based Argentine—and the World Boxing Council's version of the light-heavyweight championship. He also walked out of the ring with an attractive reputation in one of boxing's most unattractive weight divisions. Conteh's fame has been built

The Englishman put together his first hard combo in the third round, and kept up the attack, except for a slight rest he took in the eighth and ninth rounds. By then, he saw it would be a long night and he saved himself for a flurrying finish. Referee Harry Gibbs gave him the title with a 147-to-142-point verdict.

Conteh finished with a welt and slight cut under his eye; Ahumada ended up with a closed left eye and nothing to say. Ahumada's trainer, Gil Clancy, praised Conteh's work and said that his boy fought well enough to earn a rematch. Conteh's manager, George Francis, said: "Now we would like to lure Bob Foster out of retirement. This is the sort of fight the public wants to see and we will feel cheated if we don't get it." Foster dominated the light-heavy division for six years until he retired from his

Soon Dutch soldiers are going to get overtime pay or time off or a combination of both to compensate for those nasty weekends spent on guard duty or maneuvers in the field.

The Dutch Fighting Man—He's Unionized

By Bowen Northrup

TRECHT, The Netherlands (AP-DJ) .- Behold the modern Dutch fighting man. The hair, long and lank, spills from beneath the helmet. The uniform is rumpled, the demeanor cheerful and offhand. When he goes on a field march, he may wear sneakers rather than combat boots; they are more comfortable. Does he salute officers? Almost never.

The Dutch draftee, the most emancipated of Western Europe's conscripts, has privileges —or freedom from hardships that other soldiers only dream about. Soon, for instance, Dutch soldiers are going to get overtime pay or time off or a combination of both to compensate for those nasty weekends spent on guard duty or maneuvers in the field.

It's all the work of a union Yes, the Union of Dutch Conscripts, known by its initials as the VVDM. We have almost 30,000 members." Sgt. Hans Wilmink, the VVDM president, proudly says. Since the Dutch military has a total of only 54,380 conscripts, that's a fair

Official Status

A spokesman at the Ministry of Defense confirms that the soldiers' bargaining organization "has official status," The VVDM negotiates regularly with the ministry on wages and working conditions. The government provides office space for the VVDM at a base in this centrally located city, and the seven draftees who run the VVDM work in civilian clothes, exempted from other duties. "About the only time I ever wear a uniform any more is when we have demonstrations," Sgt Wilmink says with a smile. He is trained as a tank com-

Lt. Gen. C. L. van Lent, state secretary for personnel in the Ministry of Defense, points out that the conscripts' union is just one of 11 such organizations in the Dutch military. He defends the VVDM as a useful "catharsis . . . a way for the soldier to let off steam."

In the Netherlands, Gen. van Lent says, "we try to avoid polarization. Therefore, we have discussion. There is always the opportunity to discuss. soldier has the possibility of reaching to the top through the hierarchy or outside the

Set. Wilmink and his six associates are serious young men who see draftees as civilians simply doing military work for the duration. Soldiers, they believe, should have the same rights and pay as those on the

Kind of Talk

"The army is socially retarded, anti-democratic on many points," Sgt. Wilmink says. "It teaches people to accept authoritarian relationships. That is bad for the society at large. People should define for themselves what is the right way, what is their responsibility."

The VVDM soldier just doesn't cotton to old-style military dis-cipline. "The soldier doesn't accept something just because a general says it," Sgt. Wilmink

This is the kind of talk that causes old soldiers, especially old generals, to have fits. One recently retired general grumbles that "the discipline has gone out of our army. It started with the long-hair business; from that moment they began to push, push, push. . . . Now the soldiers do just what they

Shortly before retiring, this old warrior took some of his essually turned-out troops to Belgium for a ceremony, and he was mortified. "You should see them at a parade," he says. "They are a laughing stock."

Where the Dutch are leading, others are following. Indeed, the trend around Europe toward broadening conscripts' rights and reducing their term of service (Holland, for instance, plans to cut service for most draftees to 12 months from the current 16 months) is decried by many as symptomatic of growing apathy about military matters and a weakening will to defend against aggressors.

"The nation has lost confidence in its military establishment," says one Dutch career officer, who contends that the VVDM is being guided by "left-ist" groups that "want to bring

The VVDM has connections with pacifist groups, but its leaders hotly assert that the "democratizing function" of the union is healthy. "We believe that soldiers who think about freedom will be good soldiers when it comes to fighting for freedom." Says Reinout Hoefer. the bearded conscript who is secretary of the VVDM.

The VVDM was formed in 1966. Its first victory, also won by draftees in Denmark, West Germany and other European nations, was the right to wear long hair (with hairnets for on maneuvers or while working around machinery).

"You shouldn't have to change the way you look just because you're a soldier," Sgt. Wilmink Sa.ys.

Other changes followed. The VVDM won an end to lateevening personnel checks in the barracks and to reveille in the morning. (The recruit gets up when he wants to, so long as he reports for work on time.) The union worked to improve sanitary facilities and food in military camps. The requirement for wearing uniforms at meals was dropped. Then the VVDM drew a bead on saluting -"a strange way of contact between people," Sgt. Wilmink says. "A bad thing for the free man to accept."

Now salutes are exchanged only in formal appointments between an officer and an enlisted man or in formal ceremonies. And the union now is agitating for an end to all "nonfunctional" ceremonies. "They don't show the good side of our society," Sgt. Wilmink says.

Matter of Pay

The most substantial achievement of the union, however, is in the matter of pay. A decade ago, Dutch draftees were getting monthly pay of 50 guilders (about $18.50 at the current exchange rate), plus room and board. Now monthly pay ranges from $151.50 to $230.75 a month, depending on age and marital status. Another raise is coming shortly.

The prospect of paying overtime or giving time off is un-nerving military planners here. The Ministry of Defense says it has promised to provide "time or money or both" by the end of this year.

"I don't see how they can afford it," says one Western military aide stationed here. Gen. van Lent acknowledges that conscripts are becoming "so expensive" that the government is considering moves toward an all-volunteer military. (All soldiers, of course—not just draftees-receive the benefits won by the conscripts' union.) Another thing bothers the general—the question of pro-ductivity, "If I am on guard, I am just in the barracks," he
